Gil's Rock: Foggy Wednesday

Gil's Rock, at the northern end of our peninsula, is one of the few remaining ports still active in commercial fishing. I have long been fascinated with the hazardous work of these men and with the tools of their trade: floats, traps, crates, net driers, fish smokers.

I have imagined a couple of fishermen here, one who fishes for business and one for pleasure, asking that universal question of fishermen, "Any luck?"
